

Jeneen Hatoum, Director, High School Innovation, Michigan College Access Network

Jeneen brings valuable experience leading systemic innovation at both school and district levels, where her efforts resulted in significant improvements in the structure and practices within schools and a subsequent improvement in student outcomes. Jeneen's work as an administrator at a Chicago public high school led to some of the highest growth in college enrollment, scholarships awarded, and early college credential attainment in the city.

Currently, as Director of High school Innovation, Jeneen works with schools and districts to strengthen systems and structures that lead to increased postsecondary attainment at the Michigan College Access Network.

As a daughter of an immigrant parent, Jeneen has witnessed how postsecondary access can impact not only an individual, but can change trajectories for generations to follow.
